Where Two Sundays Come Together. [From Harper's Weekly, October 28.]

"Well, I never did-" "I know you never did, my dear; but you may one of these days, when our ship comes in and we start on that round of ours. We can't very well start until that metaphoric vessel does arrive; can't go out until she comes in. You see, the sinews of war are also the muscles of peace, and it needs a well-developed financial biceps to enable one to strike out effectively on such a round." "What on earth are you talking of?" said

Mrs. Penn, " with such a jamble of finance, and pugilism, and maritime affairs? It strikes me that your metaphors are slightly " Well, you said you never-"

"Yes, I was going to say that I never heard of where two Sundays came together." "Exactly. And that is what I was talk ing of. I was about to explain it to you." Do you mean to say that there is such a place 7" " I do."

" And time?" " And time."

"Then I should like to know what becomes of the Seventh Day of the strict Sabhatarians ?" "That is a theological question, my dear.

lers !" We'll not meddle with it." tongue's were ever afflicted with cancer, and "But how do they make two Sundays the surgeon replied that he never heard of come together?" a case; they were never at rest long enough for any affliction to take root.

"Just in that way precisely. They make em come together. For instance, on board a naval ves el, say, when the officer in charge of that duty finds by an 'observation' that the sun is precisely over the line of the ship's meridian (i. e., the point or degree of longitude east or west of Washington or Greenwich where she then is), he knows that it is noon of that day (to a landsman; to him it is | you blockhead, isn't he using his tongu the beginning of next day), and reports ac- now! Can't you understand every word cordingly to the proper officer, ' Eight bells, he says?" sir,' and receives reply, 'Make it so, sir, usually with the agreeable addition, 'and pipe to dinner.' So it is that the ship's officer, upon occasion, makes two Sundays come together, or for the matter of that knock's Sunday out of the week altogether, according to circumstances."

"Knocks it out altogether? Only one Sunday in two weeks ?" "Precisely. He can jump from Saturday to Monday if he will."

"Worse and worse! Well, explain, please, Let me understand the 'circumstances' under which these nautical gentlemen so coolly double Sunday or drop it." "Here goes, then. We were lalking of that little proposed round of ours."

"Ob, yes! What round?" "Why, round the world. Haven't we been speculating and castle-building on taking one of those through tickets for the yetto-be-fashionable tour, with lay-over coupons for Chicago and San Francisco, and Yokohama, and Hong-Kong, and Calcutta, and Bombay, and Suez, and Brindisi, and Paris. and London? Well, it depends on which way we take that ticket, eastward or westward, whether we lose a day-Sunday it may be as well as any other-or make one in our trip. It is usually on the Pacific ocean that this gain or loss is made, because Washington or Greenwich being the 'given or governing meridian 'from which American vessels calculate their longitude, it is only on that ocean that they find the one-hundred started off alone, and with their usual Sun-and-eightieth degree, or half-round-the-

world point, at which they effect the change." quietly went around under the horse-shed "Yes, I see that by the globe. Here is The next case was this: the one-bundred-and-eightieth degree west The father of your reporter, owing to inor east of Greenwich right in the middle of creasing infirmities, rode alone to meeting, the Pacific ocean. Go on with your yarn." half a mile, driving an old gray mate twenty "Thanks to common schools and the elecyears old, and had not failed of going every tric telegraph, most landsmen now under-Sabbath for some years. On one occasion stand that a difference in longitude makes a owing to a fall, father could not go to meeting, and on Sunday morning, as the time for difference in the time of day; that a message meeting approached, the horse, in a lot near going westward arrives at its destination bethe house, manifested great uneasiness, and fore its apparent hour of starting; or, as Pat. when the second bell struck she leaped over would say. 'it'd rache St. Louis before ye sint the feace and trotted quietly to church stopping at the usual hitching-place under it from New York.' Orreries have taught the youngsters that as the earth turns toward the sun, at the point which is full-face to that an ein tree till the close of the service when the faithful animal returned safely to luminary it is high noon, while at one quarter of the earth's circumference toward the west the house. it is just sunrise. This difference of time is, In Garrote the people become so decorous at the equator, just four minutes for each degree of longitude—equal to six hours on Sunday that the only speculation that exercises the minds of the female portion of (three hundred and sixty minutes) for the ninety degrees, or quarter circumference, above noted. Thus at St. Louis, tifteen dethe congregation is whether the ladies in front wear back-hair combs manufactured of polished manzinita, with chapparel teeth, or arlier than with us, or 11 o'clock when it whether they are only rough mountain mabogany and ten-penny nails .- Sonora Demo grees west of New York, it is sixty minutes is 12 o'clock here, and a ship circumnavigating the globe going westwardly thus gains on apparent time (laps over on to the next day) four minutes for each of the three hundred and sixty degrees of westing, or twenty-four hours for the entire circuit of the earth. In other words, going west, and keeping her record of days from the day of the week on which she starts, on arriving back at her port on what to her is Monday, she finds that it is Tuesday on shore, and she must jump from Monday to Wednesday to set herself right. Making the circuit eastwardly the case is reversed, and arriving from the west it is Tuesday on her log. while to-morrow is Tuesday to the boarding officer. The ship then doubles Tuesday and squares her record. "But most seamen correct this seeming error on passing the half-way point-i. e., on reaching the one hundred and eightieth de gree west or east of their governing meridian a day is dropped or repeated, and the ship arrives without being in next week or last week when she should be in this. Landsmen's ignorance of these facts has caused some amusing scenes on steamers on the Paolfic. Some twenty years ago the New Orleans—the first passenger steamer that ever crossed the Pacific ocean—was on her way from San Francisco to Sydney with a load of gold-hunters, including some Pike county men, whose nautical education was limited. The purser had posted his usual daily bulletin of latitude, longitude, and distance run since the previous noon—always an interesting episode of the history of a day on a long voyage—dated, we'll say, Monday the 10th. The next day it stood Wednesday the lath, the one hundred and eightieth degree having been passed. having been passed mean while, and the intervening day duly dropped. The apparent blunder caught the eye of the eager readers at once.

"Halloo, purser, what's this? You've made a mistake; you've dated this Wednes-A TMORE'S MINCE-MEAT-TO THE TBADE.—As seen for Atmore's Mince-Meat, and at his price, I offer 5,000 pounds, the BEST IN THE WORLD, put up in barrels, half-barrels, buckets, jars, and tins.
